Turkish Forces Resume Cyprus Advances

Greece Pulls Troops Out of NATO as Geneva Talks Fail

S. Threatens Cut Aid If Allies War and Kissinger Talks' Renewal

By Fred Fairis

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (UPI).—President Ford today threatened to cut off U.S. military aid to Greece unless the country's government agreed to pull its troops out of NATO's military sphere.

Athens Still In Alliance Despite Move Cites Allies' Failure To Restrain Ankara

ATHENS, Aug. 14 (UPI).—Greece pulled its military forces out of NATO today, saying the alliance had failed to stop Turkey.

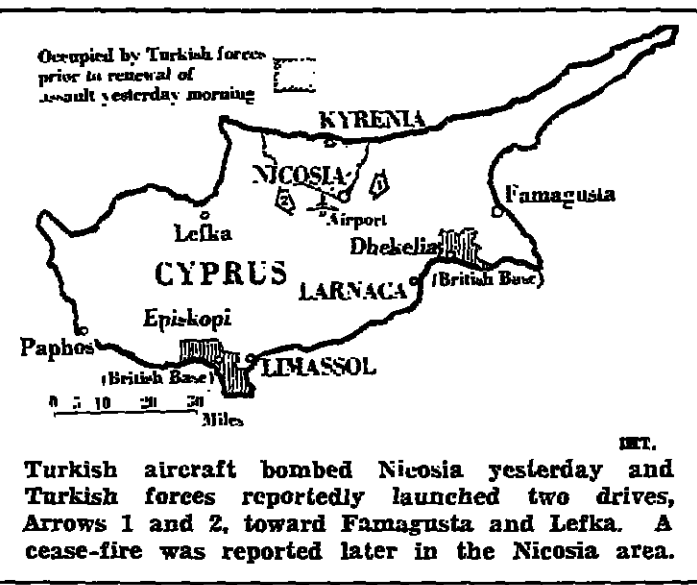

Greece will take all effective measures to face the attack, which not only threatens the independent state of Cyprus but undermines the institutions and the order of the whole world.

Turkish aircraft bombed Nicosia yesterday and Turkish forces reportedly launched two drives, Arrows 1 and 2, toward Famagusta and Lefka. A cease-fire was reported later in the Nicosia area.

Return to Peace Talks Security Council Resolution Demands a Stop to Fighting

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Aug. 14 (Reuters).—The UN Security Council, moving swiftly to try to end the new fighting in Cyprus, today demanded an immediate cease-fire and a return to peace negotiations.

The 15-nation council, called into session in the middle of the night after the collapse of the Geneva talks and the renewed Turkish attacks in Cyprus, approved the resolution unanimously.

The resolution deeply deplored the resumption of fighting in Cyprus. It reaffirmed the resolution, calling for a cease-fire and negotiated settlement, adopted July 30 shortly after Turkish forces invaded the island. It also demanded the resumption of negotiations without delay for the restoration of peace in the area and constitutional government in Cyprus.

Britain Sees No Peaceful Solution Callaghan Suggests Turkey Plotted Attack During Talks

By Alvin Shuster

LONDON, Aug. 14 (NYT).—The British government suggested today that Turkey had planned to resume war on Cyprus even before the peace talks collapsed early this morning.

James Callaghan, the Foreign Secretary who served as mediator in the abortive negotiations, said that "the orders must have been given" while the talks were still under way between the Greeks and Turks. He noted that the Turkish attacks came within an hour and a half of the breakdown of the efforts to strengthen the cease-fire on the island and to shape a long-term political settlement.

The secretary, who earlier blamed Ankara for the collapse, spoke after he conferred with Prime Minister Harold Wilson, who interrupted his vacation on the Scilly Islands to return to London. Mr. Wilson also discussed the crisis with President Ford in Washington, their first direct contact since Mr. Ford assumed office last week.

Local Truce Fails to Halt Firing on Isle Thrusts Seen Aimed At Famagusta, Lefka

NICOSIA, Aug. 14.—Turkish forces, which resumed their attacks at dawn today after the Geneva peace conference broke down, continued their advances southeast and southwest from Nicosia.

The Turkish thrusts seemed aimed at Famagusta, 35 miles east of Nicosia, and Lefka, 20 miles west of the capital. Military sources said the Turkish objective seemed to be to split off the northeast third of the island. By dusk, Turkish spearheads were reported within 5 miles of Famagusta and 8 miles from Larnaca.

Turkish planes bombed Famagusta at 1 p.m. today, dropping explosives on resort sections of the port city. Casualties were unknown.

Hotels bombarded. A British newsmen, Donald Wise of the Daily Mirror of London, said he watched bombs raining down on luxury hotels in Famagusta's tourist area.

Most of Famagusta's population had fled earlier, Mr. Wise said. Normally, Famagusta has more than 50,000 residents, but many had left after the Turkish invasion on July 30.

Terrified Greek Cypriots also were abandoning Nicosia and villages that appeared to be on the path of the Turkish advance. Early this afternoon, Nicosia Radio said the Famagusta air raid started fires near one of the numerous luxury hotels. The only things moving in Famagusta were dogs and snipers.

Libya Frees Four Hijackers Who Blew Up Jet Last Year

BEIRUT, Aug. 14 (Reuters).—Libya today released four commandos who hijacked a Japan Air Lines Boeing 747 after it had left the Netherlands in July last year, then blew it up at Benghazi airport, a Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) spokesman said today.

Stocks Plunge In N.Y., London

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP).—Depressed by uneasiness over inflation and renewed hostilities on Cyprus, the stock market fell today to its lowest level since the summer of 1970. It was the market's fifth straight day of sharp declines.

Homes, Business Sites Wrecked

Parts of Mozambique Province Swept by 'Violence, Anarchy'

BEIRA, Mozambique, Aug. 14 (AP)—The Portuguese high command said yesterday that "a wave of violence and anarchy" swept parts of Zambezia Province, Mozambique's richest farming area, in the last few days. Troops were ordered into troubled regions to quell "serious incidents" in Nampula and Mozambique Island districts, a military communiqué said.

There was no official toll of dead or injured, but the communiqué said that homes and business premises had been damaged and destroyed. Armed mobs said to include rebels of the Mozambique Liberation Front, army deserters and unemployed drifters were held responsible, the high command said.

In Angola there was speculation that guerrillas of Holden Roberto's National Front for the Liberation of Angola were mounting a new offensive.

According to reports from the Portuguese military base at Tuto, 65 miles from the Zaire border, there was a battle between Portuguese troops and the guerrillas on Sunday. The guerrillas then split into smaller parties.

The military said it expected that some guerrillas will join groups already operating in the coffee-growing areas of northern Angola, but others may try infiltrating as far south as the capital city of Luanda.

Reports said the guerrillas were carrying anti-personnel mines, of limited use in bush warfare, and supplies of propaganda material.

A spokesman at the Tuto base said Portuguese paratroopers recently killed 10 guerrillas and captured 17. A group of 180 guerrillas reportedly surrendered on Aug. 5.

Several prisoners were in their late 30s but others were only young boys. Some claimed they had been forcibly recruited in Zaire, the spokesman said.

Italian Official Warns of More Extremist Raids

ROME, Aug. 14 (UPI)—Italy's Minister of the Interior, Paolo Tanassi, warned yesterday that neo-fascist extremists using a "strategy of terror" to overthrow the government may succeed in striking again.

"It is a new and terrible turning in this strategy of terror," Mr. Tanassi told the Chamber of Deputies nine days after the bombing of a Rome-Munich express took 12 lives. He said there was no guarantee that a national mobilization of police against the extremists could avert all new attempts.

In Bologna, police today arrested Francesco Sgro, a witness to last week's train bombing, for slandering against a man he had accused of illegally holding explosives.

Mr. Sgro confessed yesterday that he had made up his story of seeing a cache of explosives and map of Rome's Tiburtina railway station held by leftist students at Rome University two weeks before the bombing. Mr. Sgro in his testimony had accused a Communist student, Davide Aio, and others of maintaining the cache.

French Bar Cut In Service Time

PARIS, Aug. 14 (Reuters)—French Defense Minister Jacques Soufflet today rejected a call to cut the obligatory military service in France from one year to six months.

France would not be able to keep enough military units operational if the time were reduced to six months, he said.

Gaullist party secretary general Alexandre Sanguinetti had suggested that military service be reduced by half in view of France's reliance on the atomic deterrent for its defense.

Mr. Soufflet replied that the French nuclear force needed backing by conventional forces to make it effective.

room for peace efforts to bear fruit, but "if those efforts prove futile, then we shall go to war."

In southern Lebanon, local sources said that Israeli gunners today shelled areas of Lebanon which were evacuated by Palestinian guerrillas two days ago.

The sources said that only crops were damaged in the artillery shelling of Rachaya el-Fokkar and Kfar Shuba in the Arakoub area.

Syria Sees Israeli Attack

DAMASCUS, Aug. 14 (AP)—Syria charged today that Israel was preparing to launch another Middle East war by making a large-scale attack on Syria.

It was the first official Syrian charge that Israel was preparing for new fighting and said that Israel will "alone bear the responsibility" if the war resumes.

For four days, the Arab press has reported that Israel was massing troops and arms along the Syrian, Lebanese and Egyptian borders.

The Syrian statement today cited reports that "Israeli military preparations and belligerent statements by enemy [Israeli] leaders make it clear Israel wants to come out of its acute internal crisis by attacking Syria."

Public Allowed On Nixon Beach At San Clemente

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., Aug. 14 (UPI)—Richard Nixon is talking daily drives to a heavily guarded and deserted beach at the Camp Pendleton Marine base, 12 miles south of his San Clemente estate, while the general public is being welcomed back on his own beach.

Southern California surfers who regard the waves breaking off the point at the former President's estate as the best in the area are being allowed back on the strand after five years of being excluded by the U.S. Secret Service.

That change came yesterday, and now the general public willing to walk nearly a mile can use the 500 yards of sand.

So far, the offer of an open beach has had few takers, however. Access is a difficult accomplishment, because to the south, entry is forbidden across Marine Corps and Coast Guard reservations.

To the north the private residential colony next to Mr. Nixon's estate is patrolled by armed guards. Farther up the coast is a state park where visitors can leave their cars then walk along the rail bed of the Santa Fe tracks which lead along the beach.

Oregon Democrats Fill Morse Vacancy

BAKER, Ore., Aug. 14 (UPI)—State Sen. Betty Roberts, a Portland attorney, has been chosen to replace the late Wayne Morse as the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate.

Mr. Morse won the Democratic nomination in the May primary but died on July 23 at the age of 73. Sen. Roberts, 51, will oppose the Republican incumbent, Sen. Bob Packwood, who ousted Mr. Morse in 1968. She was chosen by the party's state central committee on the fourth ballot.

DISCUSSING CYPRUS—President Ford, confronted by his first major international problem, met yesterday with Anatoly Dobrynin (left), Soviet ambassador to the United States, and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

convinced that only a return to negotiations can bring a formula that will return "constitutional government to Cyprus and peace and stability throughout the area."

Ethnic Division Backed

However, the State Department spokesman again declared U.S. support for "an autonomous area" on Cyprus for the Turkish minority population. He strongly denied that Washington was "tilting" in favor of either Turkey or Greece.

Asked what leverage this country had in forcing the two to stop fighting, Mr. McCloskey said, "If two NATO allies should resort to war, it should be clear they should not count on a continuing line of military assistance from the United States."

American military aid this fiscal year amounts to $80 million in sales credits for Turkey and $71 million for Greece. Turkey also is to get $80 million in military grants.

The United States today stepped up its diplomatic moves with the State Department drafting and dispatching messages to both Athens and Ankara.

Mr. McCloskey would not disclose their contents, but they followed an hourlong meeting between President Ford and Mr. Kissinger this morning.

Presumably, the messages stressed Washington's hope that both governments would back off from a threatened war and restore the Cyprus cease-fire. The messages coincided with a cease-fire renewal plea from NATO members meeting in Brussels.

Alliance partners also urged Greece to reconsider as soon as possible its stated decision to remove its forces from NATO.

"We would regret a withdrawal by Greece," Mr. McCloskey said. "But it is not entirely clear to us what Greece's intention is."

In announcing its pullout, Athens said that it was making the move because NATO could not "stop Turkey from creating a situation of conflict" between the two easternmost partners in the Western Alliance defense line.

Dobrynin's Visit

In addition to calling Britain's prime minister and foreign secretary, Mr. Ford met for half an hour with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, who went to the White House with a message to the new President from Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

White House Press Secretary J. P. TerHorst did not rule out the possibility that they discussed the new events in Cyprus. The Russians have generally kept in the background in this dispute.

Within the NATO alliance, although any Greek-Turkish war would take place virtually on their doorstep and could block the Soviet Navy's access to the Mediterranean.

Mr. TerHorst said that both Mr. Ford and Secretary Kissinger viewed Cyprus as a diplomatic problem so far as the United States was concerned. The President, the press secretary said, is "concerned but very hopeful" that further diplomatic pressure could bring Greek and Turkish representatives back to the Geneva negotiating table.

Mr. TerHorst told reporters: "As you know, Secretary Kissinger has been attempting, through American and his own diplomatic contacts in the Cyprus area, to prevent a breakdown in the negotiations. The secretary of state and the President continued to watch the Cyprus situation very closely today."

At the Pentagon, officials said privately that this government is taking a wait-and-see stance on the possibility of Greco-Turkish fighting and Greece's proclaimed withdrawal of forces from NATO.

Some sources said that neither country had enough ammunition for more than two weeks of all-out warfare.

Defense Department spokesman Jerry Friedman said that the U.S. Sixth Fleet is cruising normally in the Mediterranean and no special military moves have been taken by the United States. Under questioning, however, he disclosed the grounding of U.S. military planes at bases in Greece and Turkey because, he said, both have closed their airspace.

He reported that Soviet fleet activities appeared "normal," with the Russians' Mediterranean fleet remaining at a strength of about 55 ships. He said that he did not know of a Soviet military alert anywhere.

A few troop-filled jeeps were in the streets.

The government-controlled Nicosia Radio went on the air before its scheduled morning opening, while the town shook with explosions from the air strikes.

Nicosia Radio said the battle at the airport was still going on at dusk and that at least 38 UN soldiers had been wounded and three killed in heavy fighting. A UN spokesman earlier put the casualty figure at 50 wounded—15 Turks and four Britons.

Three Australian UN soldiers died when a Turkish jet strafed their vehicle, the spokesman said.

The streets of Nicosia itself were virtually deserted. Thousands of cars fled south when the shooting began. Those who would not leave stayed indoors and only the Turkish radio called on Greek Cypriot forces to lay down their arms and surrender "to prevent further bloodshed."

One of the targets of the Turkish air strikes at dawn was a camp of a 950-man Greek Army contingent on the northwestern outskirts of the capital.

A series of strikes was observed against the camp, which is one mile from the edge of the Nicosia airport area.

Nicosia Radio said 28 persons were wounded when Turkish planes bombed a mental hospital in the capital.

The bombing smashed the industrial east end of the city, leaving it a smoking and burning mass of rubble. Industrialists said the island's economy would be crippled for years.

A UN spokesman said that all UN forces on the island had withdrawn to camps near the Nicosia airport, indicating a possible withdrawal from the buffer zones in the Kyrenia area on the northern coast. He would not elaborate.

Strong Protest

The deaths of the Austrian UN soldiers brought "the strongest worded protest" from UN military commander, Maj. Gen. Prem Chand, to the commander of the Turkish forces, the UN spokesman said. He said the Austrians were riding in a white vehicle clearly marked "UN" and carrying a blue UN flag.

Glafkos Clerides, the acting President of Cyprus, protested to UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim about Turkey's "disregard of the Security Council's resolution on Cyprus."

Mr. Clerides said the Turks were "extending the area under their control."

"The Cyprus government expects the forthright implementation of the cease-fire resolution of the Security Council, requesting at the same time that the secretary-general take such immediate steps as to insure the full compliance of the resolution," Mr. Clerides said.

Heroin Shipment Is Seized in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP)—The seizure of 75 kilograms of heroin concealed in a shipment of simulated antique furniture was announced today by federal narcotics agents.

Five persons were held in a total of $9 million bail after one tried to sell information about the smuggling scheme to agents for $400,000.

The narcotic, reported to be 90 per cent pure and worth $3 million at the wholesale level alone, was built into furniture sent from France and traced to a Long Island warehouse, officials said. Authorities estimated the street sale value at $112 million.

These arrested were Maurice Leon Schoch, 39, of Nice, France, described as the informant, and his brother, Claude, 38, also of Nice, identified as a dental technician. Nadine Beest, in her forties, Albino Garro, described as an Argentine citizen, and Claude Breteche, also from France, were the others.

mind or that the pullout was temporary.

Mr. Chorasfas read a three-minute statement at an emergency two-hour meeting of the NATO Council and announced that Greece was pulling out its troops but was not resigning from the alliance.

NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said the alliance had no power to intervene in the Cypriot crisis or force Turkey to halt its military action.

Its objective is to end the long-lasting sufferings of the Turkish Cypriots and to enable them to live freely on their own soil, in a way befitting humanity."

"Part of Entity"

"The Geneva agreement," he told newsmen, "should be implemented as a whole. The cease-fire provision, which is only a part of this entity, has been put into effect in spite of the difficulties arising from the fact that the security zones requested by Turkey were not established."

"Yet the government of Greece and the Greek Cypriot administration have been adamant in disregarding certain provisions of the agreement that are the essential conditions of establishing security on the island," Mr. Ecevit said.

"Under the circumstances, the cease-fire provision can no longer be considered as binding on Turkey as a guarantor power,"

Amin Ex-Wife Found Dead, Dismembered

KAMPALA, Aug. 14 (AP)—The dismembered body of a former wife of President Idi Amin has been found in the trunk of a car belonging to a doctor, who reportedly died after poisoning himself. The doctor also administered poison to his own wife and their seven children, who are recovering in a hospital, Radio Uganda reported today.

Quoting a Health Ministry spokesman and police, the radio said that the body of Kay Adria, who was divorced by Gen. Amin last year, was found yesterday.

Autopsy showed death was caused by bleeding from an incomplete abortion, the spokesman said.

Police said that the doctor apparently killed himself after unsuccessfully performing an illegal abortion on Gen. Amin's former

Miss. Voting Board Bars Meredith Bid

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 14 (AP)—The State Election Commission here ruled for the second time that James Meredith cannot be listed on the ballot as an independent candidate for Congress this fall.

Mr. Meredith, the first black man to attend the University of Mississippi, in 1962, said he would take the matter to court. He finished first in the five-man Democratic congressional primary election June 4 with 32 per cent of the vote.

That set up a runoff with the runner-up television executive Kenneth Dean, but Mr. Meredith withdrew. He said the runoff would have been "senseless and useless" because the party would not support him if he won.

Gunes Disclaims Fault for Collapse

Jack Kubisch

New Ambassador to Athens Considered Close to Kissinger

PARIS, Aug. 14 (UPI)—Jack Kubisch, the U.S. ambassador-designate to Athens, who is replacing Henry Tasca, will take over the position at a time when U.S.-Greek relations are in a highly sensitive and perhaps transitional phase.

Mr. Kubisch, 52, who has been the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, would appear to be accepting a demotion if it were not for the obvious importance Washington gives to maintaining strong U.S.-Greek ties in the present difficult period.

The new ambassador, who must be confirmed by the Senate before he can assume the post, first came to the attention of Henry Kissinger, then special presidential assistant for national security, while he was charge d'affaires at the U.S. Embassy in Paris following the resignation of Arthur Watson as ambassador in August, 1972.

Mr. Kubisch was chief of mission at the embassy during the final stage of negotiations between the United States and North Vietnam, at a time when Mr. Kissinger was paying frequent visits to Paris to meet with the Hanoi negotiators. As charge, Mr. Kubisch was in Paris during the signing of the Vietnam peace treaty in January, 1973, and remained here until March of that year, when John Irwin 3d, the present ambassador, arrived.

Paris Reputation

While here, Mr. Kubisch earned a reputation as a solid, hard-working, straightforward man who, though not at all flamboyant, had "presence," as a colleague put it. He is regarded as both extremely well organized and a man who is tolerant of others' opinions, who urges a free exchange of ideas among members of his staff.

His nomination as ambassador to Athens came as a surprise, both because technically it is a demotion from assistant secretary of state and because of his reputation as a Latin American specialist. His two languages are Spanish and Portuguese, with a smattering of French. But Mr. Kissinger apparently wanted someone with whom he had a close personal relationship.

Mr. Tasca, the outgoing ambassador, has denied charges that he had established any kind of "special relationship" with Greek colonels on his own. He maintained that all his activities were based on instructions from Washington. In fact, Mr. Tasca would have been expected to replace following the change Greek governments, regardless of his personal relations with the colonels.

The government of Premier Constantine Karamanlis made clear it wanted a fresh start with a new ambassador.

Mr. Kubisch, a native of Hannibal, Mo., has been a Foreign Service officer since 1964, serving in Rio de Janeiro and Mexico before coming to Paris. Formerly he was in private business, at one point was director of international operations for Bend Home Appliances Co.

"all the characteristics of genocide" against Greek Cypriots on the island, London reports said.

The monarch, who left his home after a military labored in 1977, claimed that the Turkish actions were aimed at "the annihilation of human beings and destruction of property of a large part of the Greek population on the island."

Turkey, Greece and Cyprus again closed their airspace today with the outbreak of a new war, Beirut airport sources reported.

The closures disrupted international air traffic between Europe and the Middle East and the Far East pending agreement on new civil aviation corridors to avoid war zones, the sources added.

turned to Britain from the island. The British, meanwhile, began evacuating families of troops serving on Cyprus in the start of an operation to bring more than 10,000 dependents home within the next week. The first group of 135 arrived tonight.

Archbishop Makarios, whose ouster as President of Cyprus July 15 touched off the present crisis and led to the Turkish invasion, urged the big powers to rescue Cyprus from "barbarous Turkish aggression" and accused the Turks of killing defenseless civilians.

The Archbishop, who is still recognized by London as President of the island, issued a statement from his hotel charging that Turkey was trying to achieve by "brutal force" what it could not achieve in Geneva by "blackmail and gunboat diplomacy."

His statement was followed by a noisy and violent demonstration by Greek Cypriots, who marched to the Turkish Embassy in protest. Three policemen were injured and about a dozen of the 3,000 demonstrators were arrested.

Kurt Waldheim, the Secretary-General of the United Nations, came to London on his way from Austria to New York and conferred with Mr. Callaghan and Mr. Wilson. Officials said that they discussed the role of the UN troops on the island and agreed that the forces should be used to protect Greek villages in Turkish areas and Turks in the Greek areas.

Foreign Minister George Mavros earlier blamed Turkey for wrecking the conference.

They said that Mr. Gunes did so by rejecting any compromise on its proposals for partitioning Cyprus into Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot self-governing districts and refusing to accept proposed 36-hour recess.

Mr. Gunes said that he rejected the proposal for a 36-hour adjournment because he "has reason to believe" that Turkey's proposals would still be turned down.

"The Greek government was preparing to bring the matter before the United Nations and was preparing subsequent delaying tactics and maneuvers designed to put Turkey in a difficult international situation," he said.

The peace conference broke down at 2:21 a.m. after an arduous eight-hour session among Mr. Callaghan, Mr. Mavros, Mr. Gunes and the Greek Cypriot Cyprus President Glafkos Clerides and Turkish Cypriot Vice-President Rauf Denktaş.

U.S. Continuity Abroad

"Let us continue," was Lyndon Johnson's earnest invitation to Congress in his first appearance as President, and Gerald Ford's pledge of "continuity" in foreign policy was no less reassuring for being similarly ritualistic. As a politician inexperienced in diplomacy, and one taking over at mid-term from a President whose forte was his personal and political diplomacy, he would hardly want to instantly chart a new international course. Moreover, the world situation, containing at the moment neither great bubbling crises nor great new presidential opportunities, permits if it does not require "continuity" rather than change. The prompt reappointment of Henry Kissinger as secretary of state and President Ford's professed intent to rely heavily upon him underscores the point.

Firmly but unprovocatively, Mr. Ford cautioned the Soviet Union—though not by name—that there are "no opportunities to exploit" in the presidential transition. It is a comment on the uncertain nature of the Soviet-American relations that such a warning was thought necessary. Whether the Soviet leadership really understands the underlying strengths of American society, or whether it still entertains hopes of making one-sided gains at periods of apparent American distraction, will now become evident. Our own view is that, both personally and politically, Mr. Ford is fully competent to handle the foreign policy tests that events will surely thrust upon him, even if the Kremlin does not contrive a test of its own. We would advise the Russians, in their contemplation of Gerald Ford, to take him at his word.

In lauding the Nixon foreign policy, President Ford did not so much define it as ask Congress and the Democrats to support his own: Bipartisanship on the Vandenberg model was very much on his mind. He then rhetorically boxed the compass, promising to go on with existing policies in respect to the United States' various allies and adversaries around the world. By stating intentions, of course, he does not ease problems. If there was a suggestive nuance in his words, it lay in the balanced quality of his global concern and in his lack of special emphasis on the need to enhance Soviet-American détente alone.

Mr. Ford's offer to "deal openly" with foreign nations hinted at a style different from the secrecy in which Mr. Nixon often operated abroad. Much of the process of diplomacy necessarily proceeds in murmurings and codes, however, and Mr. Kissinger, whose passion for secrecy is part of the public record of the first-term Nixon wiretaps, remains the secretary of state.

Though new at foreign affairs, Mr. Ford, as a man of Congress, has one potentially large advantage over Mr. Nixon in respect to those aspects of policy which depend on congressional consent. In a general way, congressional cooperation on tackling inflation will strengthen his foreign hand. More specifically, Mr. Ford urged the Senate to enact the House-passed trade reform bill. This would let the United States join the lagging Tokyo trade talks—talks first proposed by the United States—to help meet the gathering world economic crisis. Without such authority, this country and others are almost compelled to deal with economic issues in isolation from each other and on an emergency basis. Because of the congressional aspect and because of the inflation aspect, this bill is exactly the right place for President Ford's own contribution to foreign policy to begin.

Productivity in Decline

Rising productivity cuts inflation, which explains the intense attention that economists currently are giving to the productivity figures. When productivity actually falls—as it has done in the United States over the past year—the effect is to aggravate inflation and reduce the standard of living. Productivity simply means output per man-hour, and the decline says that the average American worker is producing less than he did a year ago in each hour spent on the job. Some of this drop is owed to the general slowdown of the American economy since the beginning of the year. But the long slide in productivity began long before the present recession.

One place where productivity has been rising very fast is on the farm. Particularly with the federal government's decision to expand crops, productivity in agriculture has soared. But only about 5 per cent of the U.S. labor force works on farms, and the rest of us have not been doing so well. Non-farm productivity dropped a bit from the first quarter of this year to the second; it was the fifth consecutive quarterly drop. The figure for the second quarter of this year, April through June, was 2.3 per cent below the same period last year.

The quarterly figures bounce around a lot, and statisticians warn that it is the long-term trends that count. Unfortunately, there is not much comfort for Americans in the long-term trend either. From 1960 through last year, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, American productivity rose at an average annual rate of 3.3 per cent. It was the lowest among any of the developed nations. The figure for Japan was an astonishing 10.7 per cent. For Canada, it was 4.3

per cent. For the nine leading industrial countries of Western Europe, taken together, it was 5.7 per cent. The lowest rate of gain in Western Europe was, as you might expect, in Great Britain. But even the British were increasing their productivity faster than we. We are still very rich, compared to most of the world. But our very slow rise in productivity, in relation to other countries, suggests the reason why we are suddenly running into much fiercer competition in world trade.

The productivity issue is a frustrating and uncomfortable one for government officials, since there is not much that they can do about it quickly or directly. Contrary to the importunings of various business organizations, there is no evidence that fiddling with tax breaks helps very much. One of the most important contributions that the U.S. government can make here is a purely negative one: the refusal to shelter inefficient industries from foreign competition by invoking trade barriers and special subsidies. Perhaps the one essential ingredient for improvement is the growing realization among Americans that their level of production and wealth, per worker, may shortly be overtaken in several other countries. It can hardly be argued that U.S. national interests would be damaged if other countries achieve incomes, per capita, somewhat higher than those in America. But if America continued for years with productivity gains significantly slower than other rich nations', the effect on the health of the U.S. economy would be profound. As the country begins to fashion new policies to control inflation, one mandatory test of their usefulness is their effect on U.S. economic productivity.

International Opinion

President in Action

"It was gratifying to hear Gerald Ford pledge a continuity in the U.S. support for the security, independence and economic development of the American allies and friends in Asia. What assures our great confidence in the new U.S. administration's foreign policy is President Ford's insight into the balance between détente and strength as manifested in his speech. He declared to the world that just as America's will for peace is second to none, so will America's strength be second to none... His reference that he always stood against unwarranted cuts in national defense as a congressman is most reassuring to the people of South Korea, who are facing the most unpredictable, irresponsible and militant Communist elements in the North."

—From the Korea Herald (Seoul).

Richard Nixon has returned to the shadows convinced that history will one day give him justice. There lies, undoubtedly, his most serious error of judgment. Oblivion will certainly not erase the "mistakes of Watergate." Historians will not forgive his worst crime: having by his excesses rendered inevitable the return to predominance of legislative power over executive during a century when, whether we like it or not, the responsibility for maintaining peace in the world can only belong to the strong man who sleeps in the White House—hotline and atomic trigger at his bedside—and not to an ephemeral majority that can be built and dismantled according to the caprices of opinion and backroom maneuvers.

—From Le Figaro (Paris).

There were presidents in American history, like President Harry S. Truman, who were regarded as not necessarily cut out for the requirements of national and world leadership at the time of their ascension to power. Gerald Ford's firm roots in American society and his values may prove to be a source of strength, as with President Truman, in pursuing his aspiration to be a good president for all Americans.

'New Book.'

What Kind of Vice-President?

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—In his first few days in office, President Ford has touched off an explosion of common sense in Washington. He's not waiting for the Congress to get the presidency down to size. He's looting off the grandeur and keeping the dignity, and turning the old Nixon "enemies list" into a company of friends.

The man has the town laughing again. He wants a "good marriage" with the Congress, and not just a "honeymoon," he said. He pokes fun at his voting record, which, incidentally, is not very funny. He has George Meany back at the White House and scolds him for gouging the public, and talks about common courtesy and ordinary decency as if they had gone out of style, which in a way they had.

Perhaps the most important thing so far, however, is that he is not confusing the government with the President, or babbling on about a generation of peace, but worrying about the price of hamburger and trying to get a good team on the field before the season starts.

First Test

His first test will be not only in his selection of a vice-presidential nominee, but what he gives the man to do. Nobody needs to tell him about the importance of picking a man of presidential stature. In the last 30 years, four of the seven vice-presidents have succeeded to the presidency, but these days the vice-president is, or should be, more than a spare tire kept around in case of an accident.

The truth is that the modern presidency is too much for any one man. To be chief executive, head of government and head of state, principal spokesman, secular preacher, skipper of the speed and direction of the ship, among other things, will force him either to share responsibility or pass a law inventing the 48-hour day. This is especially true of a man like Ford, who keeps his doors open and almost enjoys listening to glibby fools.

Also, there is nothing in the modern trend of picking presidents from Capitol Hill to prove that senators and congressmen make good administrators. They are accustomed to handling small staffs and talking a lot, and going for a beer or a game of golf when they feel like it. Kennedy and Johnson won no prizes for mastering the tangles of a vast bureaucracy, and even Nixon, who was supposed to be so efficient, couldn't even control his own burglars, or cover up their crimes. For precise and elevated language and leadership, read his transcripts!

A good case can be made, therefore, for making the vice-president an assistant president, with far more responsibility than any vice-president has had in the past. During World War II, Winston Churchill kept overall control of his cabinet but split it in two and put Sir John Anderson in charge as his deputy for home front affairs, while he concentrated on the conduct of the war.

Unguided Missiles

The presidential and parliamentary systems are not the same, but there is nothing in the American system that forbids a similar division. The vice-president's work is what the president says it is. He had an assistant president in Sherman Adams, and turned Vice-President Nixon into an unguided missile, whizzing around the country attacking the wicked Democrats. This relieved the dirty political work, but turned Nixon into a noisy and disruptive partisan—a role that destroyed him in the end.

The urgent war now for America is on the home front, the President recognized this by his emphasis on inflation, and by the need for consultation and cooperation to deal with it, and he has the character and experience on Capitol Hill to deal with it. A vice-president, assisting the president in the White House, with knowledge of the world, and the executive experience and political savvy to see that the president's decisions are carried out by the departments and agencies—no mean job—could not only share his executive burdens but relieve him of the social burdens of giving and listening to elegant toasts with visiting dignitaries while his mind is on something more important.

It would be hard to overestimate the amount of energy, time and sleep that has been lost by presidents in the last generation in these ceremonial dinners, with reception lines and fiddlers on the stairs, and small talk at the table—and by the weary cabinet members struggling through it too. These dinners are symbols of imperial empire that are gone, but they are also for much of the time a form of involuntary servitude, which is forbidden by the 13th Amendment.

This may be the best argument for Nelson Rockefeller as vice-president. He has always been a good, durable, steel-belted tire, accustomed to the pot-holes in New York City's roads, but he is also that rare thing: A good administrator with a knowledge of sewers and dreams, and just old enough—his age is finally an advantage—not to be a threat to the president or anybody else.

Besides, to President Nixon's everlasting credit, he brought Kissinger into the government on Nelson Rockefeller's recommendation, and the relationships between Ford and Kissinger go back a long way to the days when Ford attended Kissinger's seminars at Harvard.

So there is a chance now for Ford to decide: To field the best foreign policy and domestic policy team available, and at the same time bring the governorships and the states into his new administration. The President has stated the objectives: Peace and strength at home and abroad, "communication, conciliation, compromise and cooperation."

Now he has to go from atomospheres to realities, and put names behind ideals. He has made a brilliant beginning. As somebody said, "America is a tune, it must be sung together. But the singers are important, and the President now has to choose who will help him lead the tune."

Suggestions for Ford

By George F. Will

On the second floor of the Capitol Building, right next to the Senate floor, Lincoln and others used to sit at the mahogany table and sign bills in the closing hours of congressional sessions.

The room is staggeringly ornate, in the 19th-century style, with a huge gold chandelier, Brumidi frescoes, portraits of sundry heroes, floor-to-ceiling mirrors. And the ceiling is covered with highly spiritual and morally uplifting paintings.

Meeting there, or in a larger Capitol room, if necessary, would be a nice way for Mr. Ford, a man of Congress, to affirm that the Capitol Building, and the legislative branch, is the symbolic as well as geographical center of the nation's capital.

Another measure that would help restore reason to its throne would be an order from Mr. Ford to his staff: Unless there is some compelling necessity to do otherwise, turn out the lights and go home at a reasonable hour each evening.

One of the most unattractive aspects of life in Washington is the almost manic mock-industriousness that leads high government officials to neglect their families in order to invest their work with a solemnity that is even the serious work of government often requires or deserves.

White House staffers who I respect are men and women, who home early enough to have a baby drop on their stuffed shirt might even behave like normal people when they return to the next morning.

And now a radical suggestion: Mr. Ford should get out of his house a bit.

Presidents never suffer life's little irritations. Presidents are caught in traffic jams. A line never loses presidents' rage. Presidents never have to wait in the supermarket express check-out line, with boxes of beans defrosting in their hands while some dingbat writes a check for a $1.08 purchase.

Odd Ideas

No wonder presidents begin to get odd ideas about being it from all restrictions.

So, Mr. Ford, if you want a toothbrush, pop around to the drug store yourself and buy it. If you want to see a movie (please, not "Fattor") go to the supermarket. And good luck with the express check-out.

Go out to church. As a Episcopalian, you have a job at church. St. John's, just north Lafayette Square from your home. This business of having church services in the White House suggests that God is "Fattor" must come to presidents.

Despite U.S., Vatican Complaints

South Korea Sentences 36 More to Prison

By Richard Halloran

SEOUL, Aug. 14 (UPI)—The South Korean government announced today to suppress political activities of President Chung's Park as pressure to ease up on the military.

A secret court-martial announced today that 36 more persons had been sentenced to prison terms ranging from five to 10 years. Sentences for 23 persons are expected to be made public tomorrow, bringing the total to 194 convicted on charges of conspiring to overthrow the government.

Other major developments included the following:

- The Foreign Ministry closed investigation of the case of Kim Dae Jung, President Park's 1971 election opponent, who was kidnapped from Tokyo by South Koreans last August. The inquiry said that there was no evidence to prove that South Korean government officials were involved in the kidnapping, a charge that they were.

- It was learned that 10 Protestant leaders have sent a letter to Mr. Park, proposing that he lift his repressive decrees and grant amnesty to the political prisoners on Liberation Day tomorrow.
- The government here was the target of several expressions of concern about political repression. The expressions came from President Ford, the State Department, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Vatican, in addition to earlier protests from the French, Belgian and other European governments.

Authoritative South Korean sources have said that President Park plans to begin removing the restrictions on political activity within a few months, once he is certain that outbursts against him will not recur.

But the government apparently is not yet prepared to tell the South Korean people that. The Korean ambassador to the United States, Hahn Pyong Choon, outlined the policy to American newsmen in the United States yesterday and reports of his remarks ran in the early editions of some newspapers here today. But the government ordered the story removed from later editions.

Of the 36 sentences disclosed today, the most severe was a life term to Lee Sung Joo, an alleged member of the People's Revolutionary party, which the government considers a Communist organization.

In addition, 12 persons were given 15 years each, 13 were sentenced to 12 years apiece, eight were given eight years each, and one was given a 5-to-10-year term.

The governor gave no explanation of the charges or the prison terms.

In the Kim Dae Jung case, the South Korean Foreign Minister, Kim Dong Jo, informed the Japanese ambassador here that the South Korean government had completed its investigation of the kidnapping and found no evidence that South Korean officials were involved.

The foreign minister also said that Mr. Kim, who is being held for alleged violations of the election law in 1967 and 1971, would not be permitted to leave South Korea until the trial is over.

Japanese diplomats here indicated they felt that the South Korean government had violated the spirit, if not the letter, of an agreement reached in November under which Mr. Kim's kidnapping would be tried and Mr. Kim would be allowed to return to Japan.

Mr. Kim, in an interview in his home, where he is confined, said: "I am very shocked. I didn't expect this kind of attitude by my government. I regret that my case cannot be solved."

Ister Catholics Reveal Plan to Set Up Their Own Army

BELFAST, Aug. 14 (UPI)—A Catholic northern leader said today that Northern Ireland's Catholics intend to set up their own "army" to protect themselves from a planned Protestant attack.

Mr. Curran, head of the Catholic ex-servicemen's organization, said he had ordered the 20,000 members of his group "to report duty" as a nucleus of the new army.

"We will be retaining our own army, but we call on the Catholic population to form themselves into a people's army to protect themselves from a Protestant attack," Mr. Curran said in an interview carried by a local paper.

Mr. Curran, a Protestant, said that the Catholic community already has begun re-arming men for their homes and will step up security areas along the border with the Irish Republic.

Northern Ireland Secretary John Rees, Britain's minister for the area, warned yesterday against "irresponsible action outside the law" to set up an armed "third force."

British troops marked the fifth anniversary of their arrival in the province by firing out through a border area where two soldiers died yesterday in an explosion caused by a land mine planted by the illegal Irish Republican Army.

A British Army spokesman said the operation was aimed against members of the IRA, which said it killed the two commandos in retaliation for the shooting death of a Catholic last week.

In Northern Ireland, 30 miles south of Belfast, half the city—including 1,000 homes, two hospitals and a factory—was without electricity because engineers refused to carry out routine maintenance of cables.

The IRA has threatened to shoot men seen repairing cables because, it charges, repairmen have been helping the British Army by turning off power in areas of the city where soldiers prefer to work in darkness.

eds Renew Their Attacks in Two Towns Near Danang

DANANG, South Vietnam, Aug. 14 (UPI)—Communist troops and a weeklong battlefield battle to renewing attacks against two cities within 25 miles of Danang and shelling a provincial airport, field officers said.

The officers said Duc Duc district capital, 25 miles south of Danang and 370 miles from Saigon, came under attack and attack, but details of the attack were not immediately available.

The Duc is eight miles south of Thuong Duc, the district capital, and a week ago.

The Communists also shelled the edge of Duy Xuyen district, miles south of Danang, and launched a ground attack against town defenses.

Results of the attack were not known and fighting was continuing, battlefield reports said.

Communist gunners shelled Bien Hoa air base, 14 miles north of Saigon, for the fifth day running, the Saigon military command said today.

Military spokesmen said 67 Soviet-made 122-mm rockets have crashed into the airport and surrounding villages since last Saturday.

The command said 11 rockets hit the airport, a mental hospital and two villages today, killing a civilian and wounding 16. The single fatality was a patient in the hospital.

"The Communists are trying to support their troops by shelling the air base, and they also are trying to interrupt movements of our air force," a command spokesman said.

Bien Hoa air base is the headquarters of the South Vietnamese 3d Air Division and lies close to the city of Bien Hoa, of 85,000 population. The shelling began Saturday, killing at least three civilians and wounding a score, but has caused little damage to the military installation.

Low-Power A-Blast Touched Off in Nevada

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14 (Reuters)—The United States today exploded a nuclear device in the Nevada desert, its third announced weapons-related test this year, the Atomic Energy Commission said.

A spokesman said the blast was in a yield range equivalent to less than one megaton—30,000 tons of TNT.

He said the Soviet Union has conducted three known nuclear tests this year and China one. The French have carried out five nuclear tests at Mururoa Atoll, in the South Pacific, since June, Britain and India have also exploded nuclear devices this year.

Ross L. Malone Dies, 63; Headed U.S. Law Group

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (UPI)—Ross L. Malone, 63, who was one of the youngest men to serve as president of the American Bar Association, died yesterday in Roswell, N.M.

Mr. Malone was 47 when he was elected president of the ABA in 1958. He had been general counsel of the General Motors Corp. and also a deputy attorney general of the United States, in 1953-54.

Mr. Malone was to have been honored on Friday at the annual meeting of the ABA in Honolulu. The group had planned to give him the medal, its highest award, in recognition of his private, public and corporate law service, covering a span of more than 40 years. He was cited by the association as one of the principal drafters of the 25th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

It was proposed July 6, 1966, and ratification was completed on Feb. 10, 1967. It was the amendment under which Vice President Ford succeeded last week to the presidency and was nominated to the vice-presidency last year.

Defense on the Stand as Rothko Trial Goes Into Its 15th Week

By Morris Kaplan

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (UPI)—Mark Rothko's two children and State Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz have rested their case against the Marlborough Gallery, its head, Frank Lloyd, and the executors of the Mark Rothko Foundation, to which he willed his paintings.

The trial in Surrogate's Court went into its 15th week. The litigation shifted to the defense. Mr. Lloyd, head of the international concern and a powerful figure in the art world, will take the witness stand in his own defense.

Joining him as expert defense witness will be Claus Peris, a prominent Madison Avenue art dealer; Peter Selz, curator of the contemporary art museum at Berkeley; and Gilbert Vix, managing director of Rea Bros. London insurance brokers.

Expected Testimony
They are expected to testify that the three executors of the Rothko estate valued properly the gross value of the 800 paintings left by the artist, Bernard Reis, a director of Marlborough, Theodore Stamos, a painter, and Morton Levine, an anthropologist, were executors of Mr. Rothko's will.

The artist's 25-year-old daughter, Kate, and her 10-year-old brother, Christopher, sued to dismiss the executors, and cancel the contract they made disposing of the paintings in a bulk sale and consignment to Marlborough Gallery. Rothko committed suicide Feb. 25, 1970.

The executors estimated the gross value of the estate for tax purposes at $6,311,632.96. But witnesses called by Mr. Lefkowitz placed its worth as high as $82 million. Kate and Christopher Rothko are also involved in a struggle with the Rothko Foundation, to which their father willed his paintings.

The suit alleges that the contract "wasted the assets" of the estate by selling the 100 paintings to Marlborough for $1.8 million and consigning 700 others to Marlborough to be sold at a commission of 50 per cent. It charges also that Mr. Reis and Mr. Stamos were guilty of self-dealing. Mr. Stamos became a client of the gallery several months after the contract was signed.

Senior Citizens Take to the Road on Motorcycles

By Georgia Dulca
CENTER MORICHES, N.Y. (UPI)—The other day the nicest motorcycle gang roared up to a movie theater near here, and a tiny figure in a leather jacket appeared at the ticket window waving a pink card.

"Do you take senior citizens' cards?" asked 65-year-old Nellie Zimmet, gray bangs peeking from the helmet she wore while riding a 750-pound Harley-Davidson Electra-Glide, known in less savory circles as the "hag."

Nowadays, a senior citizen's card means more than a discount at the movies. That and a motorcycle may even qualify one for membership in the Angelle Hellions, an elite Suffolk County touring club for retired couples aged 60 and over. Sort of a Heck's Angels.

Leathers are not required attire, although most Hellions prefer them. Mrs. Zimmet, her husband Nat, 67, and their neighbor Dave Cuccia, 61, always zip up their leathers before zipping down the Long Island Expressway. "You gotta keep up with the crowd," Mr. Zimmet says.

On the other hand, Lucy Cuccia, 60, travels in a luminous space suit that matches her silvery hair and gives off a lovely glow from the Cuccias' Honda CB-500. "We let Lucy ride in front," Mrs. Zimmet said. "She lights the way."

No, the Angelle Hellions, aren't listed among the American Motorcycle Association's 1,500 chartered clubs, nor can they claim to be the country's first cyclist club. But they're the best kept secret. The Wheels, who rally in Florida every year during something called Speed Week, should not be confused with the middle-aged retirees who accept members as young as 40.

Even so, the Hellions are perhaps the newest (barely a year

mud of Dave Cuccia when, in 1969, he retired as a rack jobber (a supplier of housewares to supermarkets) and moved from his Ossining, N.Y., home to a bay-front colonial here on Laura Lee Drive. At the time, Mr. Cuccia was contemplating nothing more strenuous than pulling the boat out of the water. Before long, he began hearing a vacuuming sound. It turned out to be a certain madcap couple from South Street. They had the bike, the boots, the helmet, the goggles, the whole "easy rider" bit.

Mrs. Cuccia was not impressed. "I remember looking out the window and thinking, 'Boy, that woman has got to be out of her mind,'" she now recalls.

Eventually, the couples met while fishing. Mr. Cuccia was soon hooked on motorcycles, and Mrs. Zimmet, a fairly new rider herself ("I wasn't going to let him pick up some young chipmunk"), persuaded Mrs. Cuccia to give it a whirl. "OK, but just around the block."

That was 5,000 miles ago.

A favorite trip is the 65-mile run to Montauk Point, with stops here and there to explore dunes, eat hamburgers and check fishing stations "to see where they're running."

Once "terrified" of motorcycles, Mrs. Cuccia recently indulged her grandsons David, 16, and Michael, 9, with a one-cylinder Chibi for backyard scrambles.

Mrs. Cuccia sticks to the Honda and the highway, of course. "I love it. I don't even hold it back anymore. I feel like a butterfly out there."

Mrs. Zimmet feels "30 years younger" and Mr. Zimmet feels "50 years younger," which makes sense since the retired fuel oil dealer was just 18 when he first rode with the now-defunct East New York Motorcycle Club.

"I paid $200 for my first motorcycle, brand-new. This baby cost me $3,300," muses Mr. Zimmet, patting his Harley.

Motorcycling has changed a lot since those days, but the Angelle Hellions claim to keep up with the young ones and the wild ones. "And we always have. That's the courtesy of the road." Lately they've been thinking about a little trip to Fort Lauderdale... In the fall, before the bad weather sets in.

"The boys are trying to convince us," Mrs. Zimmet said, smiling and looking almost convinced.

Biblical Fortifications Found in Jordan

AMMAN, Aug. 14 (AP)—Archaeologists have found the fortifications of the biblical city of Hishbon, built around the 12th century B.C., 20 miles south of Amman, the Jordanian Antiquities Department announced yesterday.

The excavations, carried out this summer, were sponsored by Andrews University in Berrien Springs, Mich., and the American School of Oriental Research. The team included 15 members from 10 countries: Jordan, the United States, Australia, Canada, Britain, New Zealand, Germany, Denmark, Norway and Indonesia.

The Latecomers on the Festival Circuit

PARIS (UPI)—The following is a list of festivals beginning Sept. 1 or later (previous lists have appeared in the IHT on March 20, April 9, June 6 and July 16, 1974)—with addresses where additional information can be obtained. Festival information received later will appear in the Arts Agenda.

Mazamet, France (Sept. 1-8): This mainly Bach festival in Languedoc is in its ninth year. This year the principal performers are the New England Conservatory Orchestra and Chorus, conductors Gunther Schuller, Lorna Cooke de Varon and the Rev. Emilie Martin, and organist Michel Chapuis. The Christmas Oratorio is the principal Bach item in the program, which also includes major works by Schumann and Beethoven. (Maison du Tourisme, Square G. Tournier, 81200 Mazamet, France.)

Conductor Gunther Schuller of New England Conservatory Orchestra, to appear at Mazamet, France, festival.

Josef Soler, (Via Layetana 139, Barcelona).

Festival d'Automne de Paris (October-November): Really several festivals in one, including dance (Alwin Nikolais, Meredith Monk, Roland Petit); theater (Calderson's "Autosacramentales" by the Nuria Espert Company, "Timon of Athens" by the Bouffes du Nord staged by Peter Brook, Robert Wilson's "A Letter for Queen Victoria" and "Goodbye Mr. Freud" by the Grand Magic Circus); contemporary music in several places, including programs by the embryonic Boulez-led Centre Beaubourg, and art at the Musée Galliera and the Centre National d'Art Contemporain, 13 Cité Bergère, 75009 Paris.

Besancon, France (Sept. 5-15): The 24th International Young Conductors Competition, and the concerts will include commemorations of this year's anniversaries of Schoenberg and Fauré, and the world premiere of Marius Constant's "Le Jeu de Saint-Agnès." Among the performers on hand will be Alfred Brendel, Colette Herzog, Gundula Janowitz, the Paternin Quartet, 1 Soloist Veneti, the Ensemble Vocal et Instrumental de Lorraine, the OKEF Orchestra Nationale under Sergiu Celibidache and the Orchestre de Paris under Josef Krips. (Festival International de Musique, Parc des Expositions, 35000 Besancon, France.)

Berlin (Sept. 7-Oct. 31): A large-scale homage to Arnold Schoenberg, many of whose important years as composer and teacher were spent here, is the centerpiece of this year's festival with participants including the Berlin and Vienna Philharmonies, the Deutsche Oper, the London Sinfonietta, the Juilliard Quartet, Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, Barbara Scherler, Maurizio Pollini and including major exhibitions on the composer in the Akademie der Künste and the National Galerie. There is also the usual rich program, including the local premiere of Britten's "Death in Venice," a visit by the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta, and a Bauhaus Archive exhibition covering the years 1923-33. (Berliner Festwoche, Bundesallee 1-12, Berlin 15.)

Bonn (Sept. 14-28): The bulk of the program deals with the city's principal native son, Beethoven, presented by performers that include Maurizio Pollini, Sviatoslav Richter, Rudolf Serkin, orchestras from Los Angeles, Leipzig and Bonn, and the Juilliard and Smetana Quartets. New music concentrates on Penderecki and Xenakis. (Kulturamt der Stadt Bonn, Kurfürstenstrasse 2, 53 Bonn-Bad Godesberg, West Germany.)

Perugia, Italy (Sept. 20-Oct. 4): The concert, opera and choral program here centers on music with religious associations, and the events are held here and in other Umbrian towns. (Sagra Musicale Umbra, 06100 Perugia, Italy.)

Warsaw (Sept. 21-29): Eastern Europe's leading festival of contemporary music is in its 18th year, offering as usual a rich program of works and performers from East and West. (Warsaw Autumn, 27 Rynek Starego Miasta, 00-282 Warsaw.)

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia (Oct. 5-20): This is the 10th year for this festival in the Slovak capital, on the border not far from Vienna. It includes a tribute for young musical interpreters as well as performances by native and noted foreign soloists and ensembles. (Bratislava Music Festival, Slovkoncert, C. Umlecka Agentura, Leningradská 5, Bratislava.)

Wexford, Ireland (Oct. 23-Nov. 3): Mainly for rare opera, this year comprising Mayr's "Medea in Corinto," Massenet's "Thais," and Peter Corneilus's "The Barber of Bagdad," but also including concerts and revues by Michael Aspinall—the last named including "An Evening of Italian Rubbish" and "A Golden Treasury of Victorian Songs." (Wexford Festival Opera, Theatre Royal, Wexford, Ireland.)

The GP Quartz
Reliability to match its extreme accuracy

The Girard-Perregaux Quartz watch brings you remarkable accuracy: one minute a year. Just as remarkable is its reliability, amply demonstrated by the full series of endurance tests that the GP Quartz passed with success at Switzerland's Neuchâtel Observatory.

DENNIS THE MENACE

ALL SAID AND DONE

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

WHY is this latest volume of W. Simone de Beauvoir's autobiography so tedious to read—so reminiscent of the old joke about spending two weeks in Philadelphia last weekend? Miss de Beauvoir herself provides some clues when—while detaching the confessional mode against critics who accused the first volume of her memoir, Force of Circumstance, of abandoning aesthetic considerations and offering up a raw, unedited document—she writes: "Whether it is a question of a meal, an autobiography, an essay, an historical work or no matter what, the writer attempts to set up communication with others by means of the uniqueness of his personal behavior; his work must make the existence of this experience evident and it must bear the mark of that experience—and it is only by means of his style, his tone of voice and his rhythm that he communicates his experience to his work. No particular kind of writing is on the face of it privileged; none is excluded."

Which seems fair enough. So how does "All Said and Done" stand up by these criteria? It certainly makes evident the existence of Miss de Beauvoir's experience. It describes virtually everything she has done or thought in the 40 years since "Force of Circumstance" was published: the books she has written and read, the movies, plays, and exhibitions she has seen, the music she has heard; the trips she has taken; the food she has eaten; the conferences she has spoken at; the dreams she has woken up from; and the opinions she has formed and unformed.

But as for "the mark of that experience," it appears to have been such an overpowering burden for the author to bear that she hasn't bothered to do anything with it except dump it into 1,000 pages for her readers to do nothing with.

unlike: "All one can say about her rhythm is that it pushes us away with steady repetition." But that is "the uniqueness of (her) experience." I can judge it most accurately by her references to the United States. In a capsule history of our involvement in Vietnam, she writes, with an ideological optimism that is almost charming: "To oppose Dien the people formed a National Liberation Front. The Pentagon sent in ever-increasing numbers of troops to crush the guerrillas. The American left wing cried against this interference, with the University of Cornell spearheading the movement. The professors sent Johnson a letter of protest and they organized a pacifist demonstration. At the beginning of 1965 they invited Sartre to give lectures at Cornell. The entire left wing wanted him to come—his presence and support at their meetings would be of the utmost value. He accepted."

Of the aftermath of the My Lai massacre she writes, without a word of criticism: "It has no doubt because these methods (of wanton murder) were so widespread that Nixon had the man responsible for the massacre of My Lai absolved—among so many war criminals why choose him as a scapegoat rather than another." And in general her capsule history of this country's past and history are so superficial and tendentious that even readers who share her political outlook will find her portrait hard to recognize. So in judging the uniqueness of her experience (actually I should refer to "the uniqueness of their experience" since she rarely offers us a political judgment without coupling it to those of Jean-Paul Sartre), one can only conclude that if the experience with which she shares the world is as original as her understanding of America, then her art lies in the realm of fiction, not autobiography.

—By Alan Truscott

On the diagrammed deal South came to regret jumping at a reasonable price, which a little more thought would have revealed a better one.

He found himself in a contract of six spades after North bid aggressively. Once South had bid spades and diamonds, North correctly judged that the hands would make well: six high-card points in each hand, five trumps in the side-suits, added up to considerable slam potential.

West led the heart queen, and South stared at the dummy. He could count 11 tricks, and there was no obvious way to try for a 12th. However, after a few seconds' thought—not much, as it seems odd—South saw a chance.

If one defender held exactly three spades and four or more diamonds, there was a possibility to maneuver a club ruff in the dummy. For this purpose, it was necessary to surrender a club trick, so after capturing West's best-queen lead with the ace, South led the club three from dummy.

East hopped up with the club king, and returned the ten of hearts, forcing South to ruff. Now South led a spade to the queen and a spade back to the ace, revealing the spade division.

Thinking that he must use dummy's trump to draw East's remaining trumps, South hastily changed his plan. He led to the diamond king, picked up the trumps with finesse, and cashed his remaining diamonds. He hoped to squeeze West in hearts and clubs, a plan that would have succeeded if West had begun with the queen and jack of clubs, or with more than four clubs. As it was, the plan failed. East won the last trick with the club jack.

In the post-mortem, the other players pointed out the flaws in South's thinking. He should have stuck to his original plan: by cashing the club ace and all his diamond winners, he would have been able to ruff a club in dummy at the 11th trick, and catch East's trump in a coup position at the finish.

More important, South could have found a better plan if he had thought longer at the start. The right procedure was to hope for a three-two trump division, and try for a dummy reversal. If he could get three hearts in his hand and eventually draw the last defending trump with the spade queen, he would have an excellent chance of 12 tricks.

Superficially, that plan would fail, since East has four trumps. But a totally different procedure becomes available when South's heart ruff at the second trick collects the ten from East. South can then abandon the dummy reversal and draw trumps, starting of course with the ace or king. He can then enter dummy with a diamond lead and surrender a heart trick to West. A heart winner in dummy then constituted the 12th trick.

John Matlack

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (UPI)— Southpaw John Matlack tossed a four-hitter last night for his fifth shutout of the season—tops in the National League—and batterymate Jerry Grote hit a two-run homer to lead the New York Mets to a 3-0 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Matlack, boosting his record to 11-4, struck out eight and walked one while pitching the Mets to their second straight triumph over the National League West Division leaders.

The Mets' left-hander was in fearful of twice, once in the fifth, when he gave up two singles with one out, and again in seventh, when Ron Cey tripled after one out. Both times Matlack retired the next two batters without allowing the runners to advance.

inning, picked up his third victory in seven decisions, while Marshall, in his 79th appearance of the season, blew a chance for his 15th save.

Cubs 6, Astros 5
At Chicago, the Cubs scored four runs in the first inning and then held on with late-inning help from Oscar Zamora and Jim Todd to defeat Houston, 6-5, and end an eight-game losing streak.

Cubs' starter Steve Stone, who hurled the first six innings, gave up only one earned run but was replaced by Ken Pralting when he gave up a leadoff single to Lee May in the seventh. Pralting pitched to two batters, then was relieved by Zamora.

Dick Ruthven, 5-8, picked up the victory while Jim Barr, 10-6, took the loss.

The Phils scored three times in the first when Dave Cash singled, stole second and scored on Larry Bowa's single. Schmidt followed with his 26th homer of the season.

Schmidt connected again with none on in the third and the Phillies added two more off starter Barr in the fourth. Del Unger singled and scored on Jay Johnstone's double. Larry Cox then singled to score in Johnstone's.

Pirates 4, Reds 3
At Cincinnati, Richie Zisk and Al Oliver drove home eight runs between them as Pittsburgh got 21 hits while beating the Reds, 14-3.

Larry Demery went the route for the Pirates to notch his third victory in seven decisions while scattering nine hits, including homers by George Foster and Don Driscoll. The 21 Pittsburgh hits marked a season high against Reds' pitching. Jack Bil-lingham was the first of four to pounce on the mound and wound up with his eighth loss against 14 victories.

Padres 2, Cardinals 1
At St. Louis, Dave Winfield drove in two runs with a single and a double to back the 5.1-3 inning relief performance of Lowell Palmer and give San Diego
a 2-1 victory over the Cardinals.

Winfield, who leads the Padres in RBIs with 64, singled home Dave Hilton, who had doubled in the first. In the fifth, Hilton Vicente Romo, making his first muscle in his throwing arm in the first inning and Palmer relieved. Palmer allowed six hits and one run. Reggie Smith's solo homer in the fourth.

Braves 4, Expos 3
At Atlanta, Dusty Baker hit his 14th home run and an RBI single to lead the Braves over Montreal, 4-3.

It was the fifth straight victory for the Braves, who have won seven of the last eight. The loss stopped the Expos' longest streak of the season at five games.

The Braves took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Baker homered off Montreal starter Tom Walker. But the Expos tied the score in the fourth on consecutive singles by Bob Bailey, Jim Northrup and Ken Singleton.

Marty Perez led off the Braves fourth with a double. After Darrell Evans walked, Perez scored the go-ahead run on Hank Aaron's single. Baker drove in Evans with a single and Aaron later scored on a groundout by Vic Correll.

Royals 6, Tigers 2

In the American League, at Detroit, Amos Otis had his eight-game hitting streak terminated but drove in two runs with a pair of sacrifice flies and Steve Mingori continued his perfect relief pitching as Kansas City beat the Tigers, 6-2.

Mingori took over with one out in the eighth inning and shut out Detroit the rest of the way to make it 25 1/3 consecutive innings in which he has not allowed an earned run.

At Pittsburgh had been coasting along with a four-hitter until a single was followed by Gary Sutherland's fifth home run of the season. Al Kaline's double forced the Royals to bring in Mingori to protect Pittsburgh's eighth victory in 11 decisions.

A's 5, Yankees 1

At Oakland, Billy North had two hits, scored two runs, drove one in and stole his third base and Ken Holtzman pitched a seven-inning to lead the A's to a 5-1 victory over New York.

Holtzman, who had lost two previous starts to the Yankees this year, went the distance to even his record at 13-13. George Medich, touched for six hits and five runs in six-plus innings, suffered his 11th loss against 13 victories. It was his fourth consecutive defeat.

Red Sox 3, Angels 0

At Anaheim, Luis Tiant picked up his 18th victory with a four-hit shutout to tie Chicago's Wilbur Wood for the major league lead in triumphs as Boston defeated California, 3-0.

The victory, Boston's fourth in 11 meetings with the Angels this season, gave the division-leading

Red Sox a four-game lead over idle Cleveland in the American League East. The loss was charged to Ed Figueroa, 2-4.

Orioles 5, White Sox 2

At Baltimore, Jim Palmer, making his first start after 54 days on the disabled list, pitched six innings, as the Orioles beat Chicago, 5-2, with the help of Boog Powell's grand slam home run.

Powell connected in the first off Bart Johnson after the Orioles loaded the bases with one out on a walk and two infield throwing errors.

The homer, Powell's eighth of the season and his seventh grand slam, cleared the centerfield fence at the 410-foot mark.

Brewers 5, Rangers 1

At Arlington, John Briggs' two-run single ignited a four-run eighth inning that carried Milwaukee to a 5-1 decision over Texas.

The game was interrupted by a near-brawl that emptied both benches.

In the bottom of the eighth,
Brewer shortstop Tim Johnson was injured when Ranger first-baseman Mike Hargrove slid into him at second base. While a trainer was administering to Johnson, Ranger third-base coach Frank Lucchesi, apparently incensed by comments from the Milwaukee bench, walked toward the dugout and immediately became involved in a shoving match with Brewer outfielder Ken Berry.

Both benches headed toward the confrontation, but no fight erupted.

American on the fringes of world tennis recognition, defeated third-seeded Ilie Nas-tase of Romania, 6-1, 6-1, yes-

"Historically, it was my best win," said Brown, ranked 44th in the United States.
"But theoretically, it wasn't a great tennis match. It wasn't Nastase, winner here in 1972, played badly and Brown merely had to keep the ball

Nastase attributed his 30-minute elimination to "mental exhaustion."

He had finished the dou-

NFL Packers Get Hendricks in Colts Trade

GREEN BAY, Wis., Aug. 14

(UPI)—The Green Bay Packers acquired all-pro linebacker Ted Hendricks yesterday but the price was high and the long-term benefits doubtful.

Hendricks, a 6-foot-7, 230-pounder who carries the nickname "Mad Stork" because of his frame, came to Green Bay as part of a deal that sent second-year man Tom MacLeod, the Packers' rookie of the year in 1973, to the Baltimore Colts.

As part of the deal, the Packers will get Baltimore's No. 2 draft choice next year, and the Colts will get Green Bay's eighth-round choice.

Hendricks is likely to be available to Green Bay this year only, since he recently signed a lucrative contract with Jacksonville of the World Football League. The contract takes effect next season and Hendricks described it as "pretty iron-light. I'd rather not go into details, but I'll definitely be with the Packers in 1975."

Hendricks, 28, a five-year veteran, said he hoped to help Green Bay to the playoffs.

"I've been a Packers fan ever since I was in grade school in Miami," he said.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (UPI)—
The New York Giants traded defensive end Carter Campbell to the Cleveland Browns today in exchange for tight end Chip Glass.

Both players already have signed contracts to play in the World Football League next year. Camp-

Glass with the Jacksonville Sharks.
